Two waves of strong winds damaged trees across northwest Alabama. Saturated soils enabled trees to be uprooted rather easily by sub-severe winds in the 40 to 50 mph range. The first wave of wind around 6:30 AM uprooted a tree in the Athens area, toppling a powerline and knocking out power to 5000 utility customers in the area. The second and more widespread wave of strong winds was produced by a suspected "gravity wave" during the late morning hours, resulting in several reports of tree and power line damage in Colbert and Lauderdale Counties.

A strong surface high over the Appalachian mountains kept temperatures at or just below freezing across much of northern Alabama Tuesday morning. At the same time, a strong southerly low level jet developed and lifted Gulf of Mexico moisture northward over this cold air. This caused widespread light freezing rain and sleet to occur in portions of southern middle Tennessee and northern central Alabama. Most locations received a glaze to 1/10 of an inch of icing.

A tornado tracked through the northern portions of the community of Belle Mina on Christmas Eve. The tornado developed in a forested area just east of interstate 65 north of Garrett Road. It toppled trees onto a vehicle being used by hunters. The tornado tracked through a cotton field for about 1/2 of a mile before intensifying to EF-1 strength and destroying two single wide trailer homes. One was lifted off its foundation entirely with debris found several hundred yards downwind. Fortunately, no occupants were in either location. The tornado then tracked into a farmstead along Mooresville Road, completely destroying two large tractor sheds. Two of the adjacent homes sustained minor damage to the roof. Several cedar and cypress trees were either snapped or uprooted. One tree landed atop a vehicle. No injuries occurred. The tornado then crossed Mooresville Road, uprooting and snapping additional trees, and collapsing a small shed onto vehicles. One wall of an old small farmhouse also collapsed. No occupants were in the home at the time.
